

Rachel

Beginning Scholar

Rachel is a third year undergraduate student majoring in art history. She is a visual learner who is optimistically discovering what she wants to study and the profession she'd like to pursue as an art historian. This is her first year conducting in-depth research using her university's library resources and this adjustment is challenging.

“ I fell in love with art history during my first undergraduate class but I'm daunted by research in general. ”

She Needs:

- Intuitive digital aides that make it easy for her to collect information.
- To understand the direction of her research (when to continue researching a specific subject, when to move on to the next subject, when to stop researching)
- Ability to print research and take notes by hand.
